

Potential IRS Penalty

The balance due on your federal income tax return is larger than $1000. By law, the IRS may impose a penalty for such a large balance due. Your AARP Foundation Tax-Aide volunteers cannot determine for you whether there will be a penalty, nor estimate the amount of penalty. If the IRS imposes a penalty or interest, they will send you a written notice to the address on your tax return. Be sure to read any notices carefully and respond as requested.

In order to avoid a potential penalty next year, we recommend you consider these options:

- Pay estimated taxes on a quarterly basis. Your AARP Foundation Tax-Aide volunteer can assist you with setting up estimated tax payments.
- Increase federal income tax withholding on your sources of income.

Visit IRS.gov and click the Check Your Federal Tax Withholding option to learn more.

Potential IRS Penalty

The balance due on your federal income tax return is larger than $1000. By law, the IRS may impose a penalty for such a large balance due. Your AARP Foundation Tax-Aide volunteers cannot determine for you whether there will be a penalty, nor estimate the amount of penalty. If the IRS imposes a penalty or interest, they will send you a written notice to the address on your tax return. Be sure to read any notices carefully and respond as requested.

In order to avoid a potential penalty next year, we recommend you consider these options:

- Pay estimated taxes on a quarterly basis. Your AARP Foundation Tax-Aide volunteer can assist you with setting up estimated tax payments.
- Increase federal income tax withholding on your sources of income.

Visit IRS.gov and click the Check Your Federal Tax Withholding option to learn more.